NEW WESTMINSTER (NEWS1130) - It's the last thing the Salvation Army needed this week. New Westminster Police are investigating after a bus rolled into the Sally Ann's thrift store at Columbia and 8th Street just before midnight.

According to police, the bus was parked, but the brakes failed and it rolled down Alexander St., knocking down a number of electrical poles and signs along the way before crossing Columbia and going right through the front of the Thrift Store.

Fortunately, no one was hurt, but the building does have about $100,000 worth of damage.
